Refinishing. All finish work is carried out exclusively with restoration grade nitrocellulose paints, lacquers and sealers. They are free from modern high content plasticising additives which means they feel, look, behave and age like the classic thin skin finishes of the '50's and '60's. A comprehensive range of colours, tints and gorgeous metallics are offered and we have been lucky enough over the years to have been able to match many early custom colours directly from vintage instruments ...

A solid finish on a Fender-style body (i.e. no binding, no logo work etc.) might be as low as $200 from a local luthier – whilst a full refin on a 335 could easily reach $600. Double that if you ask the Gibson restoration department to take on the work. At these prices it is obviously not economical to refinish the vast majority of new instruments.
